

I do not consent or favour the idea of ACMA being the ones to decide on what misinformation and disinformation is. ACMA is very conflicted in its role to do that, since its funding source determines where its loyalties lie, and as such cannot be trusted in anyway shape or form to take on this role in any genuine manner. The notion that the government and mainstream news media are exempt from scrutiny in their broadcasts etc. proves the corruption of the government in thinking it can never do or say anything incorrect and harmfully so. The last three and a half years have proven how deceptive and misleading both the government and mainstream news media they are and they both deserve the ultimate accountability for the harms they both have inflicted on our society through their false, misleading and manipulative messaging.

Please stop treating Australians like we are idiots. It's hard work trying to undo all the damage that the government and news media has done to our society for so many decades. This bill and anything that mimics it should be rejected in every way, and any further attempts to censor dissenting views from government propaganda and rhetoric is a danger to our democratic society. If ACMA can't do its job without bias, fear or favour then by definition it cannot serve the public, it only pretends to do so.
