

I am afraid for the Australian people if this law passes parliament. If this law passes, it will be the end of free speech, open debate and genuine online conversation in Australia.

Factual information changes over time, and the government can simply be incorrect about what is factual.

Even META states that this law is dangerous for the Australian people and could be used to silence free speech.

Governments that claim to be the sole voice of truth are authoritarian and totalitarian. The government would control the media, restrict free speech, punish people for stating differing views, even if they are objectively correct. This suppression of information is never a good thing for any country.

Governments are always biased. Even if Labour is happy with the law, it will inevitably be used against them.

Other countries that claim to be the sole voice of truth are Russia, China, and North Korea. Don't let this happen to Australia.
