

Given the challenges of climate change I was horrified to read the green paper. It seems the government is in the pocket of the airlines.

The plan does not address current issues nor planning building inefficiencies that exists with councils.

There's greater possibilities here to create a rail network rather than a noisy air network that requires rebuilding of the city.

The current noise doesn't match my post war home - I'm sure many others are the same. Are you considering the environmental costs of rebuilding a city too.

My only recourse given the lack of community coverage consideration is to take further action. How will the people such as my self a teacher, with a mortgage and an old house be provided for?

I don't fly - can't afford the school holiday hikes.

A very disappointed x Labour Party supporter.
