

To whom it may concern.

Australia's government, intelligence community and permanent bureaucracy are working with international partners to weaponise online censorship to quell internal democratic dissent, the greatest threat to autocratic regimes. You sell this to the wider populace as for example protecting children, ostensibly commendable, but intent is bait and switch. Most citizens will be unaware, though encouragingly I assume many tasked with making submissions will be. I am amongst those of the latter and am most certainly opposed to every intent to impose wickedness on our citizenry and country.

Sincerely,

David L Ross.
