I'm a Cinematographer that has been a professional in the screen industry for 20 years, I've seen some ups and downs, busy times and VERY lean times. We are in a position to change the regulations to help ensure a more stable local screen industry. If we can get our backyard sorted first, build a self sustaining local system then we wont be so reliant on luring overseas productions and the state of the Australian dollar.

At a time where many Australian viewers are leaving the major networks for on demand services, we have an opportunity to re-define what Australia looks like through its diverse voices.

We cant do that unless avenues are opened so these voices can be heard by an audience.
