To whom it may concern.

We had very good CDMA coverage prior to the closure of the CDMA network. There has been a steady decline in the 3G telstra signal strength and inconsistency in signal since it replaced CDMA. In this day and age a mobile network is essential to running a business. Since the government abolished the AWB single desk for wheat exports communication for hedging and marketing grain is essential. It is frustrating not to have a mobile phone signal and to see money wasted on a National broadband network. An adequate mobile phone network should come first.

Hoping something useful will come of your enquiry and it is not just another meaningless waste of money.

Thanking you
