

Submission 9 – MVSA Review 2014

We are a married couple who have found ourselves owning a lemon imported by Holden. We bought a 2013 Holden Colorado that is downright dangerous but we really have no rights or lemon laws in Australia. Now we own a large caravan and want to travel Australia with our young children. We want to get rid of our Thai made Colorado and import a brand new F250 to tow our van safely. Since the local manufacturers have dumped Aussie workers we choose to never buy from the likes of Holden ever again. We want to pay for an F250 with the same or similar safety features we have now and we know we will save money by doing our own research and making our own overseas purchase. Please let this fantastic plan go ahead so we can buy exactly what we want and need without the hassle we are now dealing with from Holden and the lemon they sold us for $66,000.00 right on 2 years ago. We can only get a trade in price of $29,000.00 while we owe $45,000.00 as you can see by our figures the rubbish they are putting onto our roads is not worth the price they are charging everyday Australians. So we should have the right to spend our money smarter.

We wait in anticipation to see the results of this government decision and we are happy to have had an opportunity to have our say on the matter.
